

Gifts of Enduring Charm

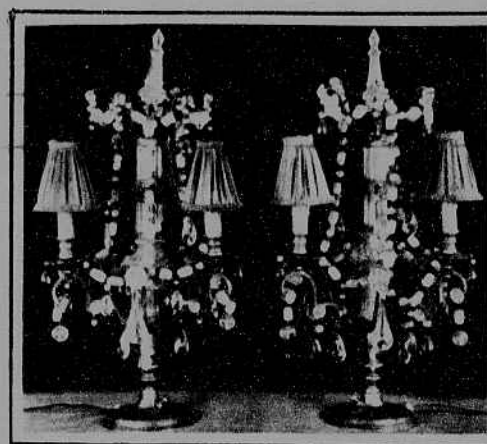

HE Hampton Shops now exhibit a larger collection than ever before, of rare antiques and unusual decorative objects gathered by our connoisseurs in England, France and Italy.

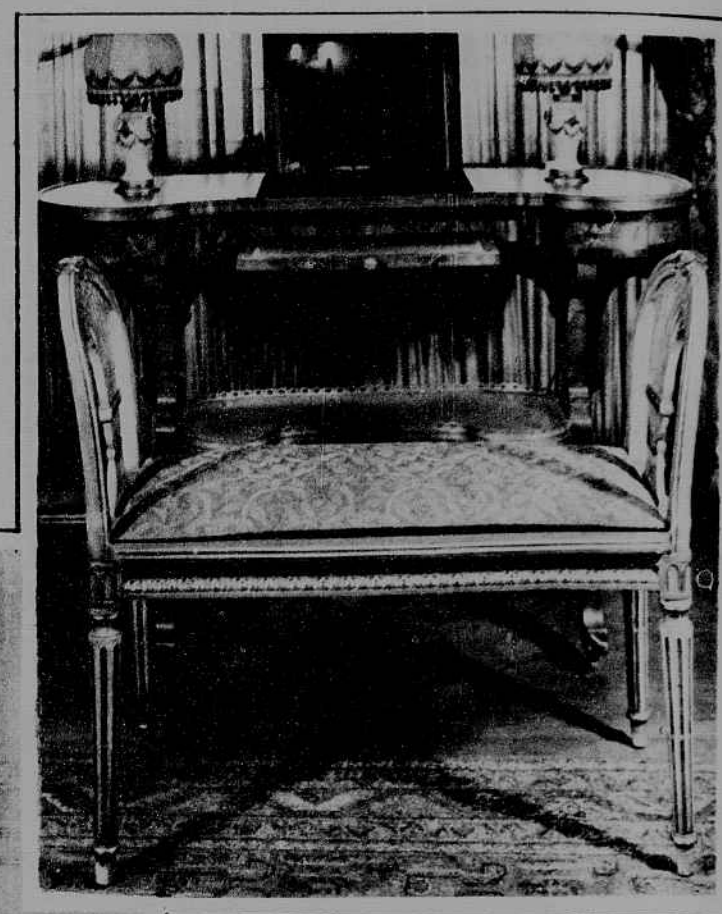

You are invited to visit this exhibit, which will suggest to those who appreciate hand-made furniture and unusual accessories gifts of lasting charm which will become heirlooms of the future.

Here you will find personal desks of lacquer, of mahogany, of exquisite marqueterie; huge French table desks with mounts of ormolu, tiny walnut desks of Queen Anne style. Here are dainty clocks, tall hall clocks, crystal lamps and girandoles, benches of every style and tables for every use.

Each piece is plainly priced and each is exclusive in design.

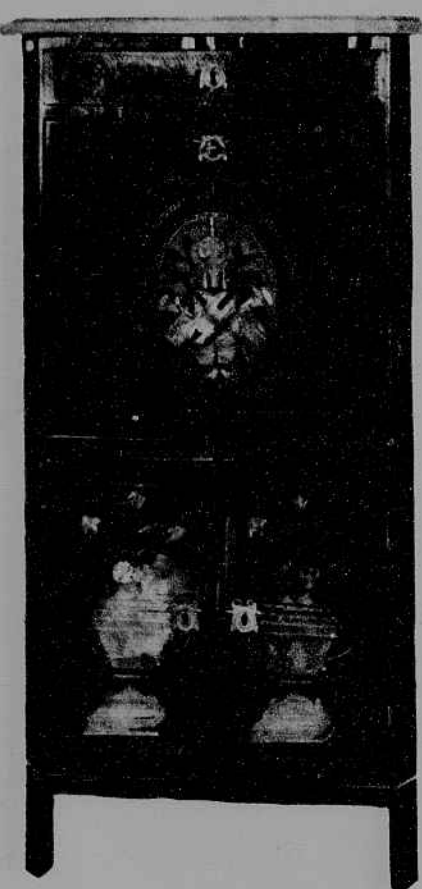

Crystal girandoles, crystal chandeliers and crystal sconces are here in wide variety of design and price. These beautiful imported crystal lighting decorations lend character and brilliancy to either French or Georgian settings and will become heirlooms of the future.

A charming bit of cabinet work is this pou-dreuse of satinwood with its sliding mirror and shelf, its brass galleries and little drawers. The bench is also imported from France, hand-carved and cushioned in gold-colored brocade. The French lamps have smart dome shades.

This boudoir, at the Hampton Shops, shows a delightful adaptation of the French treatment; the hand-carved gray-green finished frame of the sofa is upholstered in mauve brocade which tones into the mauve and gray-green lining of the green drapery. The Hampton collection of such unusual incidentals as this painted screen, the little French lamps and dainty pillows, offers many suggestions for gifts.

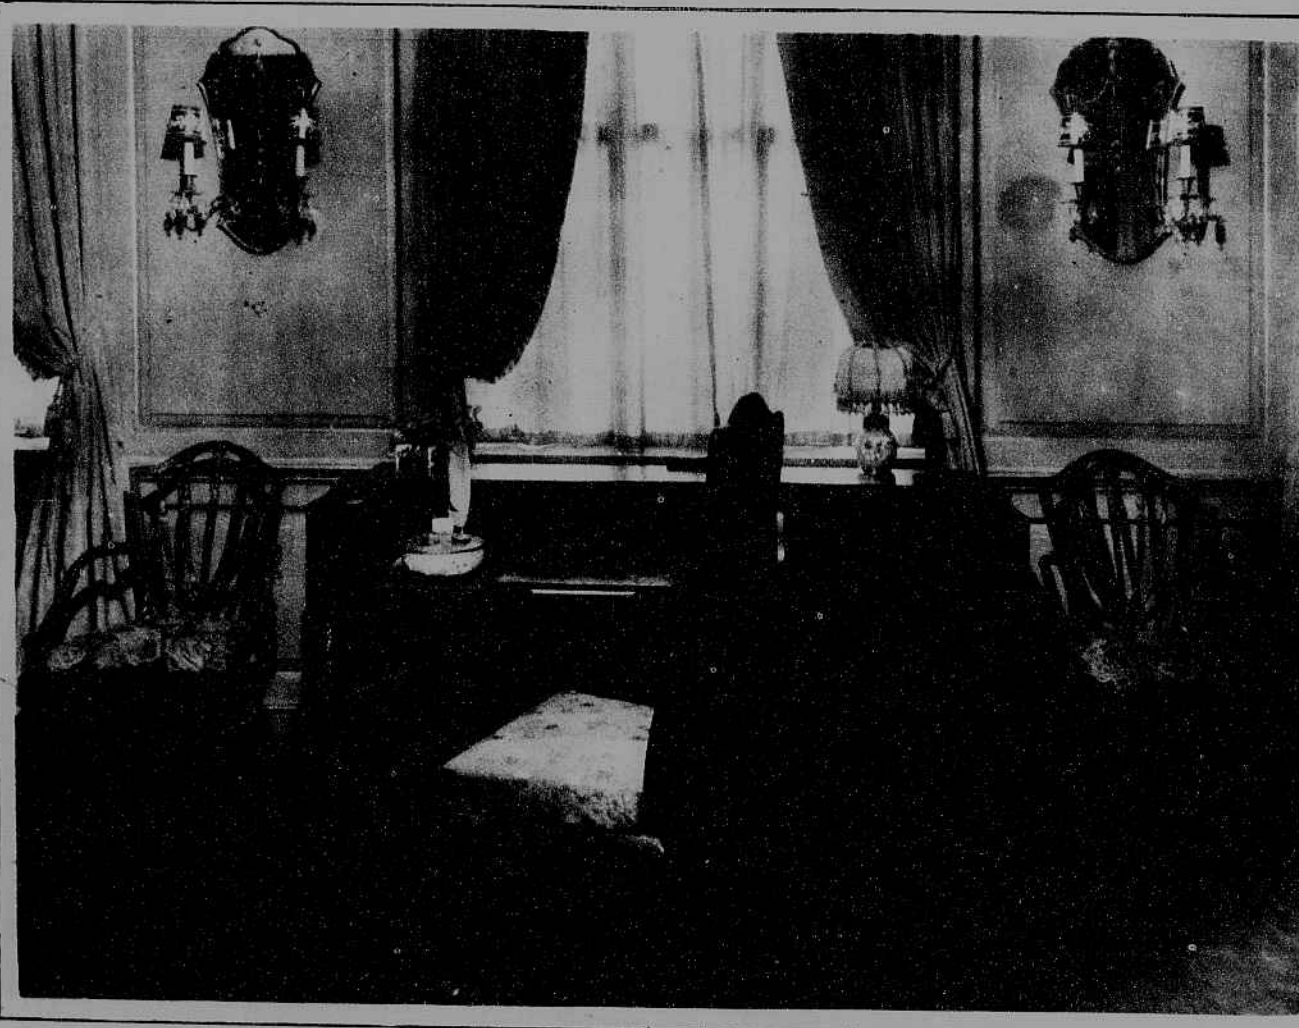

One of our large collection of French desks, this occupies only 26 by 15 inches of floor space and is an exceptionally beautiful example of marqueterie.

Another fascinating yet practical little marqueterie desk. The lamp is an exquisite bit of chinoiserie and bronze, from our large collection of these pieces.

Of bronze and decorated porcelain, this ink stand has a place for each accessory and is selected from many styles.

Each piece in this grouping will be a gift of lasting charm. The mirror-sconces with their crystal drops belong in a Georgian room, as do the beautifully carved Hepplewhite armchairs with their petit point seats.

The high-backed desk chair is as comfortable as decorative, while the delightfully decorated old spinet case of mahogany which has been transformed into a desk might grace either a Georgian or Colonial home.

The man whose wants are few seldom has enough boxes for humidor, cards, cigarettes and records. This is an antique exquisitely inlaid.

The decorative painting is so often the color inspiration of a successful room. The Hampton collection of old and new decorative paintings will solve many gift problems, for they are not expensive.

A fascinating imported lamp is this of gold-bronze and brilliantly decorated translucent glass.
